Below is a site map highlighting the key pages and buttons:

       The home page (index) is what the user will see when they first load the website. Like all of the other pages, there is a large header at the top, containing the logo and the main navigation bar. At the bottom of every page, there is a two-purpose form that collects a user's name, email address, and zip code (optional) and gives them the option to join Pamela's mailing list, send Pamela's a direct message, or do both of the previous actions.

       From the home page, the majority of users will either want to find information about a specific location or browse a location's menu. By hovering over those two options in the navigation bar, users are prompted to choose a restaurant location. Each anchor will take the user to a different page. The menu pages will additionally give the user the option of seeing/downloading the relevant menu as a PDF. From the "locations" pages (and possibly the "menus" pages), there will eventually be direct links to order online from a specific location.

       The "What's Everyone Saying?" page is meant for those who would like direct access to website reviews. However, it is not difficult to find reviews through the websites listed directly. Therefore, the page can only be accessed through a text link on the home page

       The 'order online' page has been added, but there is no working code other than a page base.